Why get involved?
How did you get involved?
What are the benefits of getting involved?
Benefits of getting involved

College students learn in three primary ways....
Formal curriculum
Associations with peers
Co-curricular involvement & leadership in student organizations
Benefits of getting involved

Develop workplace skills
Build a great resume
Make friends and connect to UNCG
Create motivation to do academic work
Increase the likelihood of graduating from college
What experience has been most impactful for you?
What is there to do at UNCG

Learn about self and engage with difference
Hundreds of volunteer opportunities
Service Learning
Recreation and Wellness
Events and programs every day
Athletics events
Multiple employment opportunities in almost every department
What type of support do you need from family and friends during your time at UNCG?
Your role

Encourage involvement
Don’t push
Let the student select areas of involvement that interest them…not you
Ask about their club activities when you talk with your student
Ask open ended questions
Remind them of the benefits of involvement, then leave it to them
Come to Family Weekend September 27-29
If my student calls and says they are bored...

Ask which student organization they have joined Ask them which performing arts events they have been attending
Ask which teams, trips or leadership programs they have signed up for Ask which shows, movies, sports events or concerts they have attended
Ask them about their club events
Remind them that boredom is a choice
How much is too much?

One to three involvements is usually about right for most new students. Most students can handle an intramural team in addition to these memberships. A paying job or heavy course load might reduce the number somewhat depending on the student’s time management skills. Memberships beyond three may begin to interfere with academic work.
How you can encourage involvement
